20% of the profit of each product is donated to Opportunity International <http://www.opportunity.org.au/home.asp> (a fantastic organisation that offers small loans to poor & marginalised women to give them the capital to set up their own small business e.g. vegetable vendor, fish vendor, egg producer, fabric merchant, etc). With training in business and life skills and peer support these entrepreneurial women lift themselves out of poverty. Generally, the first thing that they do is improve the diet of their children and the second thing they do is send their children to school. AND they make these positive changes in their lives with their own resources. How cool is that!
